The couple, who wish to remain anonymous, met on the North Shore in the summer of 2015. They were both on vacation, and they both happened to be staying at the same hotel. They started talking one day by the pool, and they quickly realized that they had a lot in common.

They spent the next few days exploring the North Shore together. They went swimming, hiking, and surfing. They talked for hours about their lives, their dreams, and their hopes for the future. By the end of the week, they were both head over heels in love.

When it was time to say goodbye, they both knew that they didn't want to be apart. They promised to keep in touch, and they vowed to visit each other as often as possible.

Over the next few months, they kept their promise. They talked on the phone every day, and they visited each other every few weeks. They fell more and more in love with each other with each passing day.

In the summer of 2016, the couple decided to take their relationship to the next level. They got engaged on the beach where they had first met. It was a beautiful day, and they were both so happy.
